

Resources for Community College Leaders and Advocates

Bridges to Opportunity for Underprepared Adults: A State Policy Guide for Community College Leaders

FOR WHOM?

- Governors, legislators, and state agency officials who are concerned about the competitiveness of their state's workforce.
- Business leaders, labor leaders, and groups that advocate on behalf of low-income people.
- Those interested in reducing barriers for underprepared adults to pursue and succeed in collegiate work.
- College presidents, trustees, and other education leaders who are seeking ways to better serve their communities.

WHAT?

- Access to resources for improving outcomes for underprepared adults.
- In-depth review of successful Bridges states' efforts.
- Practical strategies and tools to get started in your community.

ADVOCATE TOOLKITS:

Bridging the Gap between Remedial Education and Credentials and Careers

Examine five key topics – college-readiness, postsecondary transition, programming, financing, and performance accountability – that can help policymakers and educators rethink their remedial education policies and practices.

Creating Career Pathways to Accelerate College and Career Success

Discover information on how to plan, build, and refine career pathways programs, and ways to strengthen leadership and support for such programs.

Financing Community Colleges to Serve Low-Income Adults

Develop financing models that recognize the role of community colleges in enlarging education and training opportunities for individuals of all backgrounds and circumstances.

Linking Educational Opportunity and Economic Development

Expand and build community colleges' capacity to serve adult learners, and advance the link between educational opportunity and economic development.

Making the Case for Community Colleges: Tools for Communications Advocacy

Develop and sustain a communications advocacy campaign.

Using Data to Inform Improvements in Policy and Practice

Get to know what robust, data systems look like and what they are capable of doing.

Visit

www.communitycollegecentral.org to download materials or request a print copy today!